DAVID BEGBIE

David Begbie emerged from the Slade School of Sculpture in 1982 with a unique sculptural technique and the beginnings of a new visual language using steelmesh. Since then he has exhibited worldwide and his extensive list of public commissions includes the Natural History Museum and the Millennium Dome. Begbie's work is based exclusively on the human form, with the mesh creating a curious liveliness and sense of movement that makes the sculptures appear as if they have no solid surface at all. The effect a Begbie sculpture has in any setting, given that it has no palpable substance or surface, is phenomenal.
